

Early Journal Content on JSTOR, Free to Anyone in the World

This article is one of nearly 500,000 scholarly works digitized and made freely available to everyone in the world by JSTOR.

Known as the Early Journal Content, this set of works include research articles, news, letters, and other writings published in more than 200 of the oldest leading academic journals. The works date from the mid-seventeenth to the early twentieth centuries.

We encourage people to read and share the Early Journal Content openly and to tell others that this resource exists. People may post this content online or redistribute in any way for non-commercial purposes.

Read more about Early Journal Content at <http://about.jstor.org/participate-jstor/individuals/early-journal-content>.

JSTOR is a digital library of academic journals, books, and primary source objects. JSTOR helps people discover, use, and build upon a wide range of content through a powerful research and teaching platform, and preserves this content for future generations. JSTOR is part of ITHAKA, a not-for-profit organization that also includes Ithaka S+R and Portico. For more information about JSTOR, please contact support@jstor.org.

there are eight kinds of fools, and the following are some examples. A farmer hearing a noise on the roof of his house one night, went out to discover the cause of it. There he saw his two sons perched on the house, one with a long bamboo pole, which he held aloft, pointing skyward with a sweeping motion. The old man could not make out what they were up to; then he heard the younger son remark to his brother: 'You can never knock down those little yellow things with that short pole; you must get a longer one; tie two bamboo poles together!' 'What are you two youngsters trying to do?' inquired the father at last. 'Why we are trying to knock down the stars,' explained the older son. 'Go on, you stupid fellows,' shouted the old man, 'you will never knock those down, even if you had the longest pole on earth. Don't you know those are the holes through which the rain falls?'''

For very short stories the next is a good example: 'A samurai was once walking along the street when he saw a sign to the following effect: Fencing and sword practice of all schools taught here! On going in to inquire, he was told that none of the household knew anything of fencing. Thereupon the officer demanded why they put out the sign. 'O,' replied one of them, 'that is only to frighten away robbers.'''

DR. J. INGRAM BRYAN, in the Japan Magazine.

THE NEW YEAR PINE

Atarashiki
Toshi no hogigoto
Kiku niwa ni
Yorodzu yo yobo-o
Noki no matsu kaze!

While New Year celebration fills my mind and heart,
I seem to hear above the palace eves apart,
Winds calling midst the pines my garden doth adorn:
The voice of countless generations yet unborn!

MOONLIGHT ON THE SNOW

Kie nokoru
Matsu no kokage no
Shirayuki ni
Sasu kage samishi
Ariake no tsuki!

At dawn, how cold the waiting moon doth shine
On remnants of the snow beneath the pine!

By Meiji Tenno
Trans. by Mrs. Douglas Adam.